MINING BOSSES SCARE CAMPAIGN

TO PROTECT SUPER PROFIT

Labor is going to make sure that all Australians share in the resources boom not just New York and London suits.

But the head honchos in the mining companies are running scare campaigns to protect their massive pay packets.

They will say that your job is at risk because of the new Resources Super Profits Tax – that is an outright lie.

The AWU has always put the job security of our members first. But we know that the new tax will not cost any jobs in the resources sector – in fact it will spur on job creation.

Labor's proposal will simply ensure that the profits of our nation's natural resources are shared with all Australians. It will be reinvested in mining communities rather than lining the pockets of the super rich.

After all these resources belong to all of us not just the big mine companies.

Please stay in touch with your AWU organiser if you have any concerns and if your boss is spreading lies at your mine let us know:

FACT

A similar tax has existed in the oil & gas industry for 20 years and the industry is growing bigger and bigger every day.

FACT

Smaller and less profitable mines will actually pay less tax under this scheme – increasing job security.

FACT

The new tax will mean that $5.6 billion will be spent in making our mining communities better places to live and work

FACT

Some mining bosses are already spreading lies about closing mines. Liberal Party bankroller Clive Palmer has claimed he shut down a project in SA – however it turns out that the project never existed: liars can't be trusted!
